I SEE HERE IN ARCHIE'S YARD?

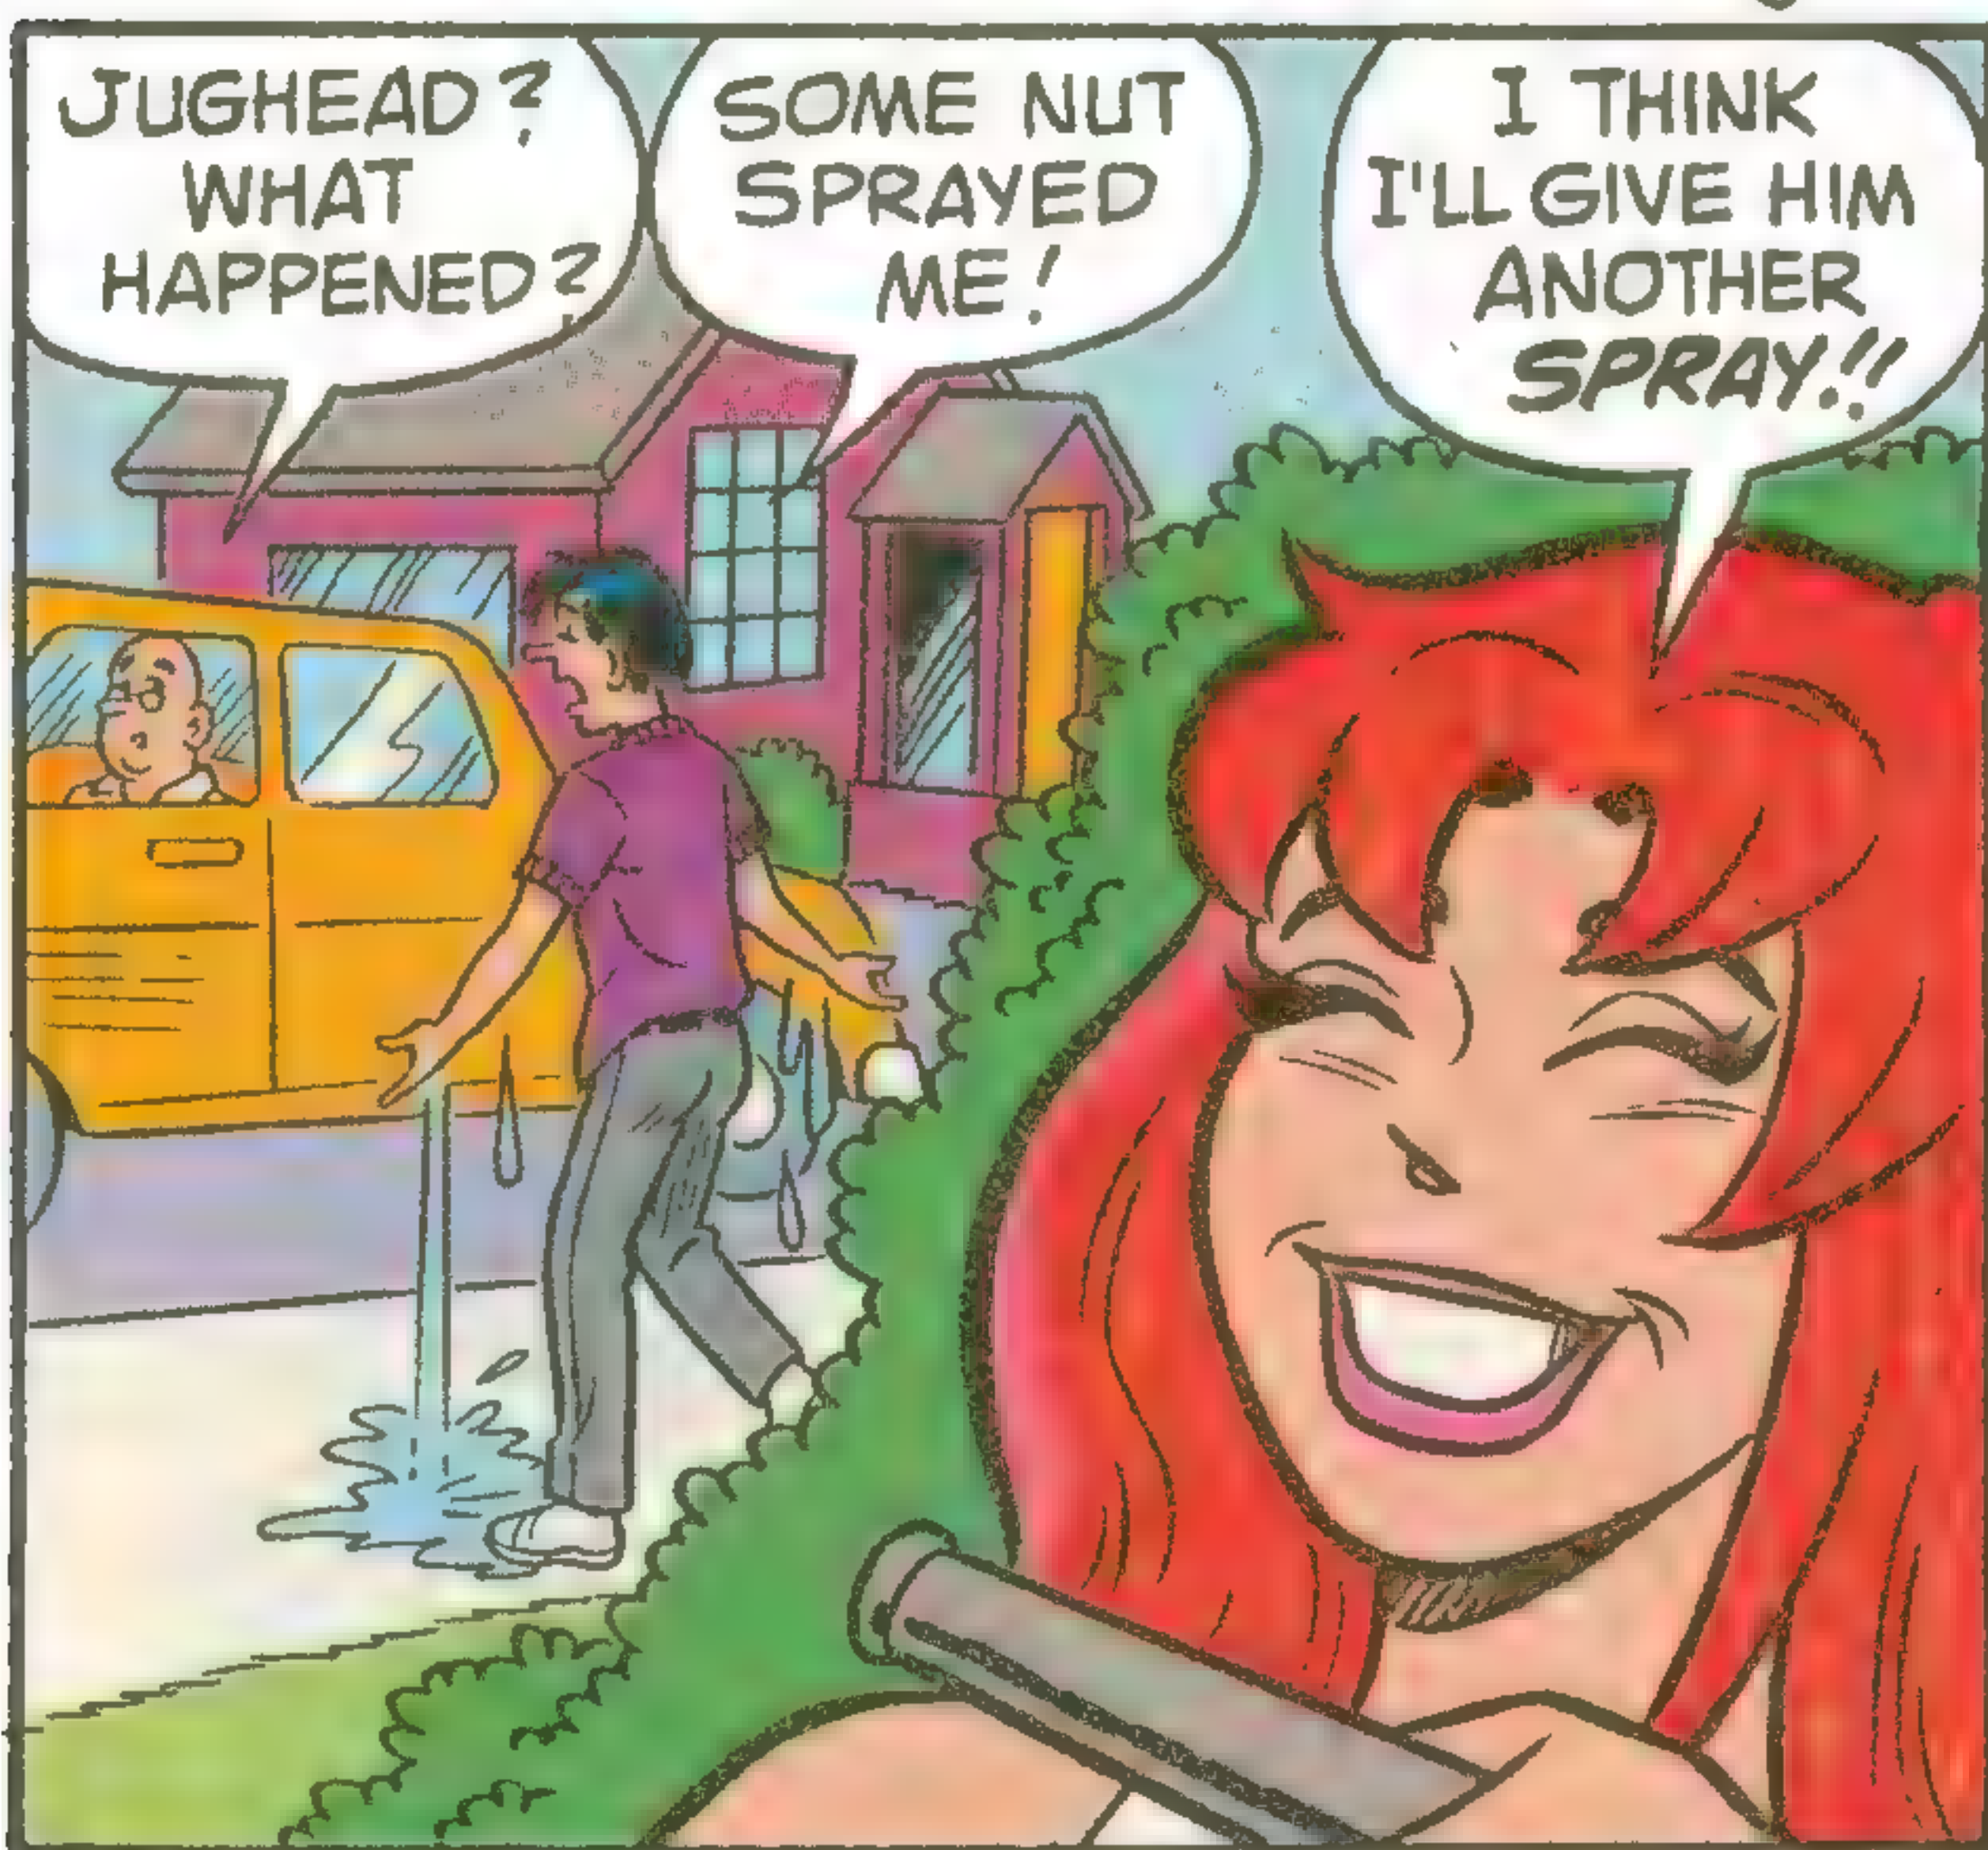

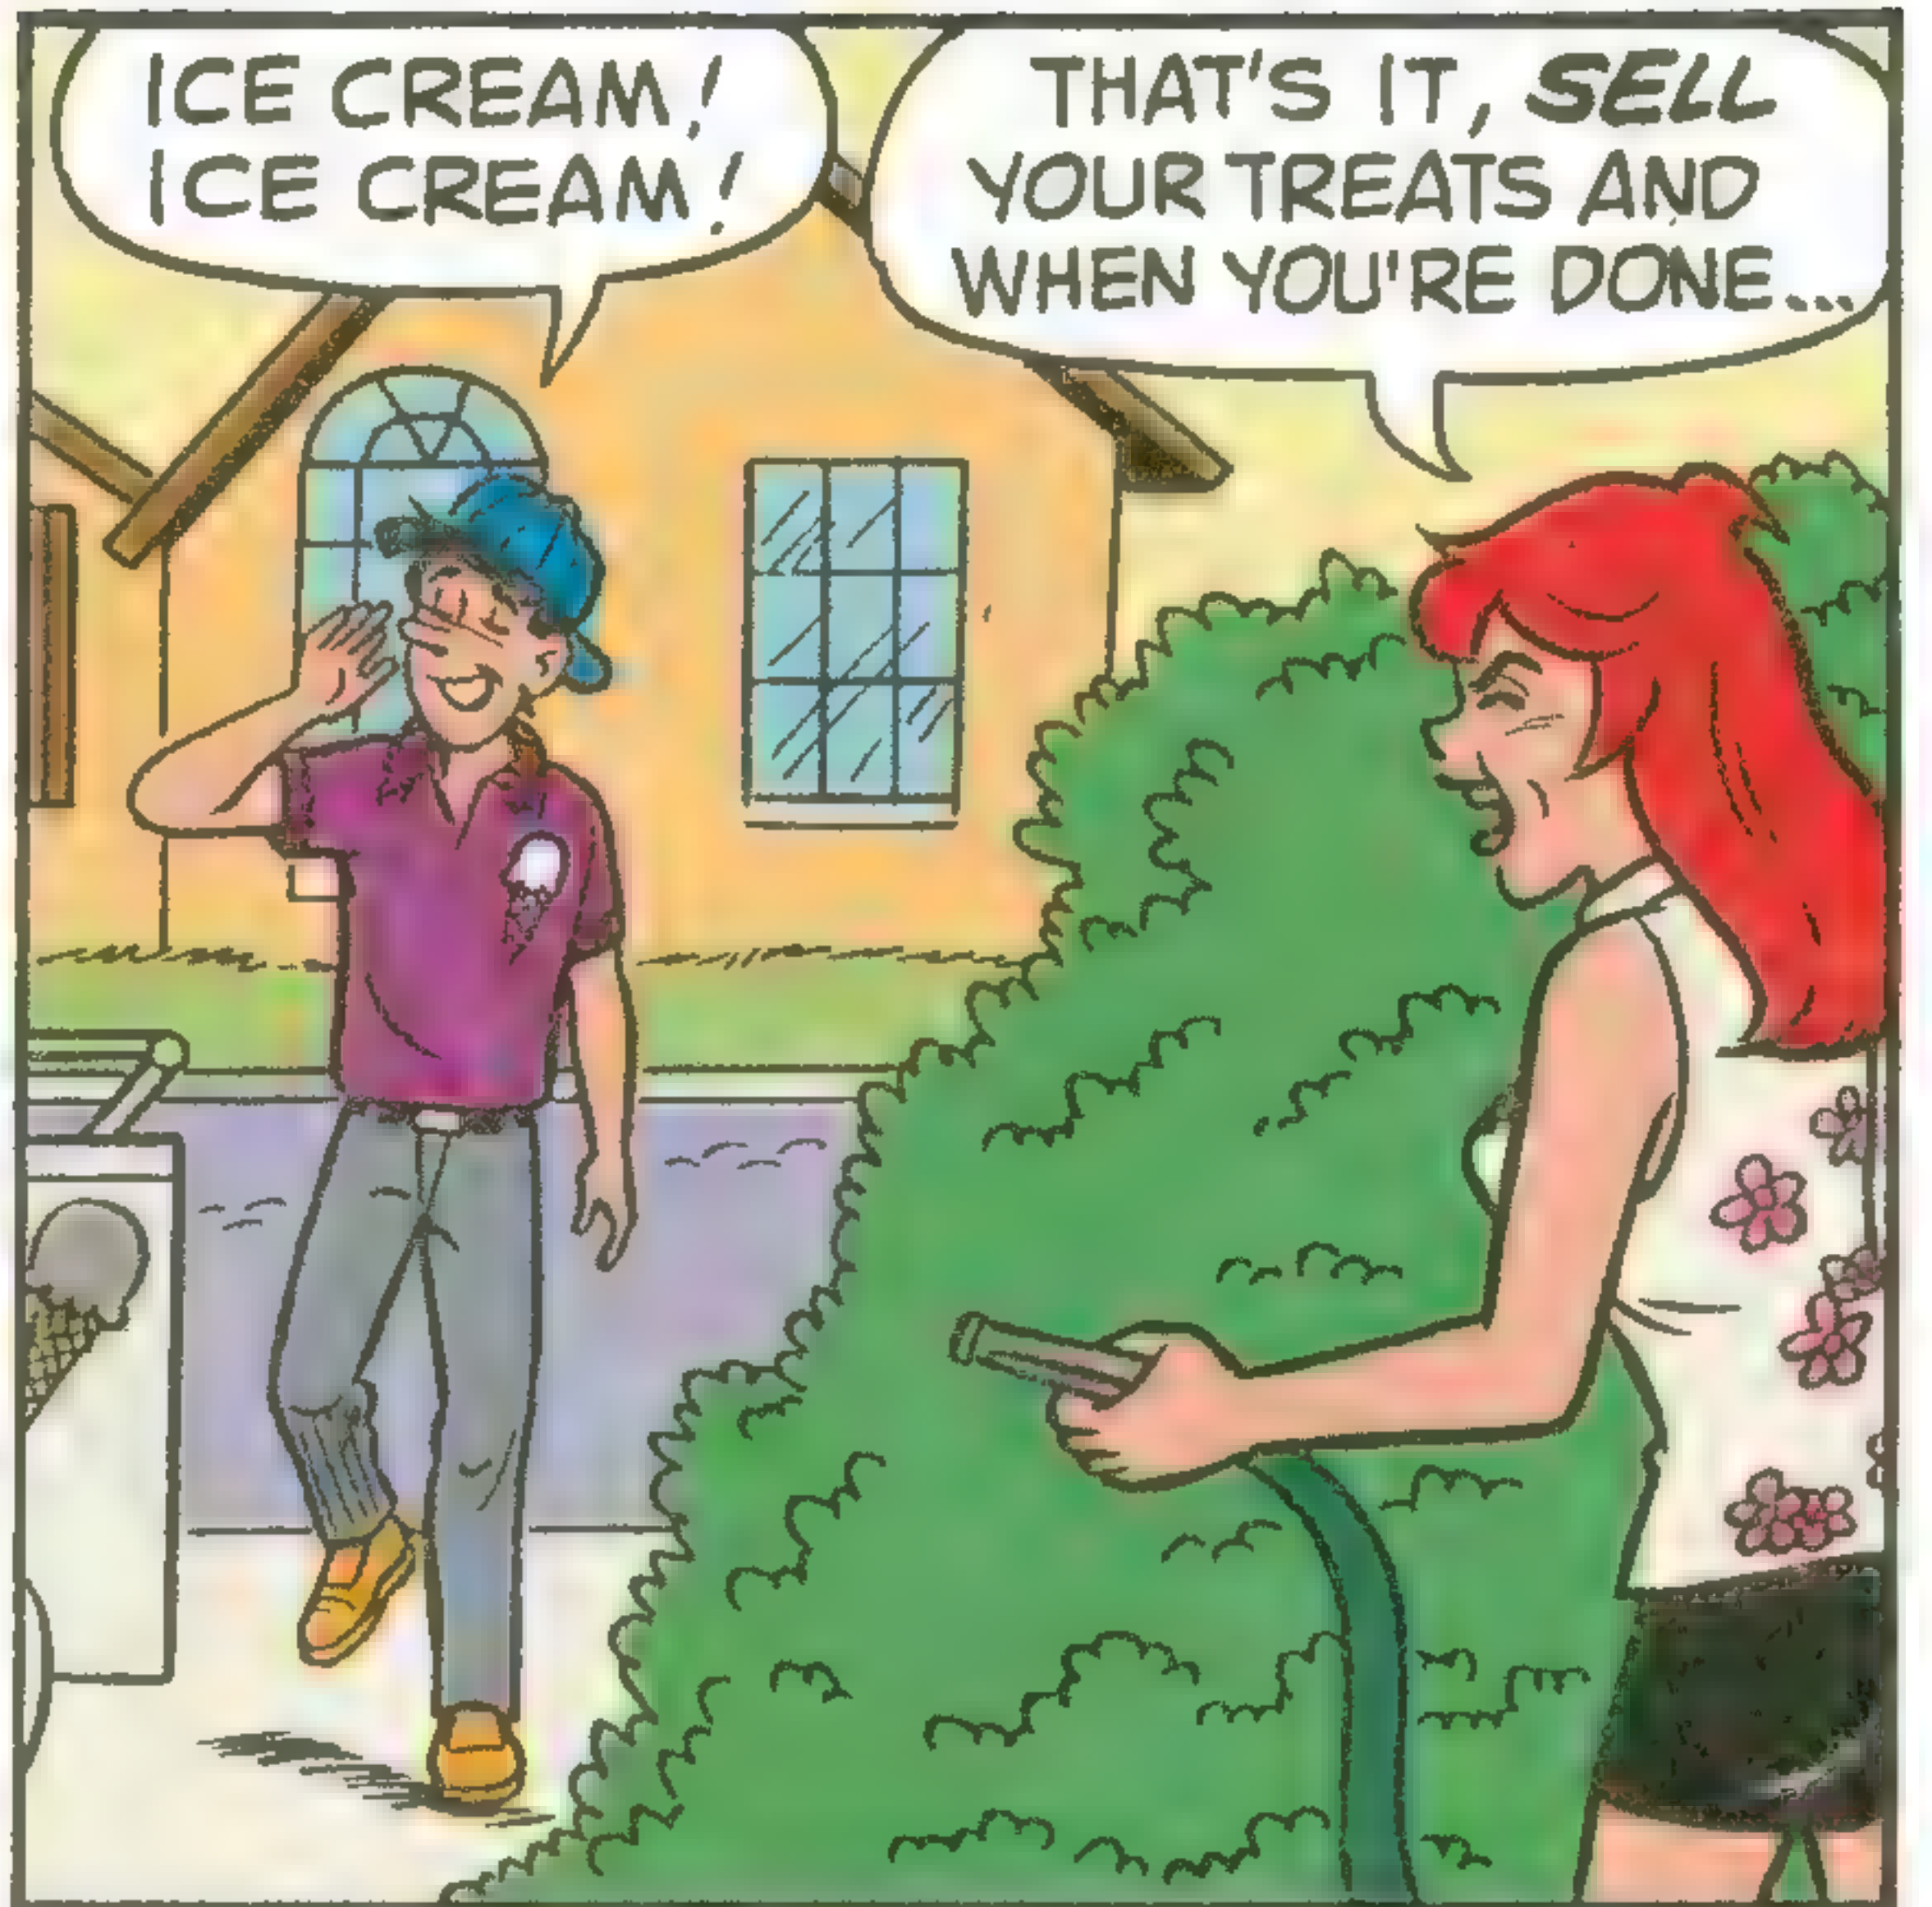

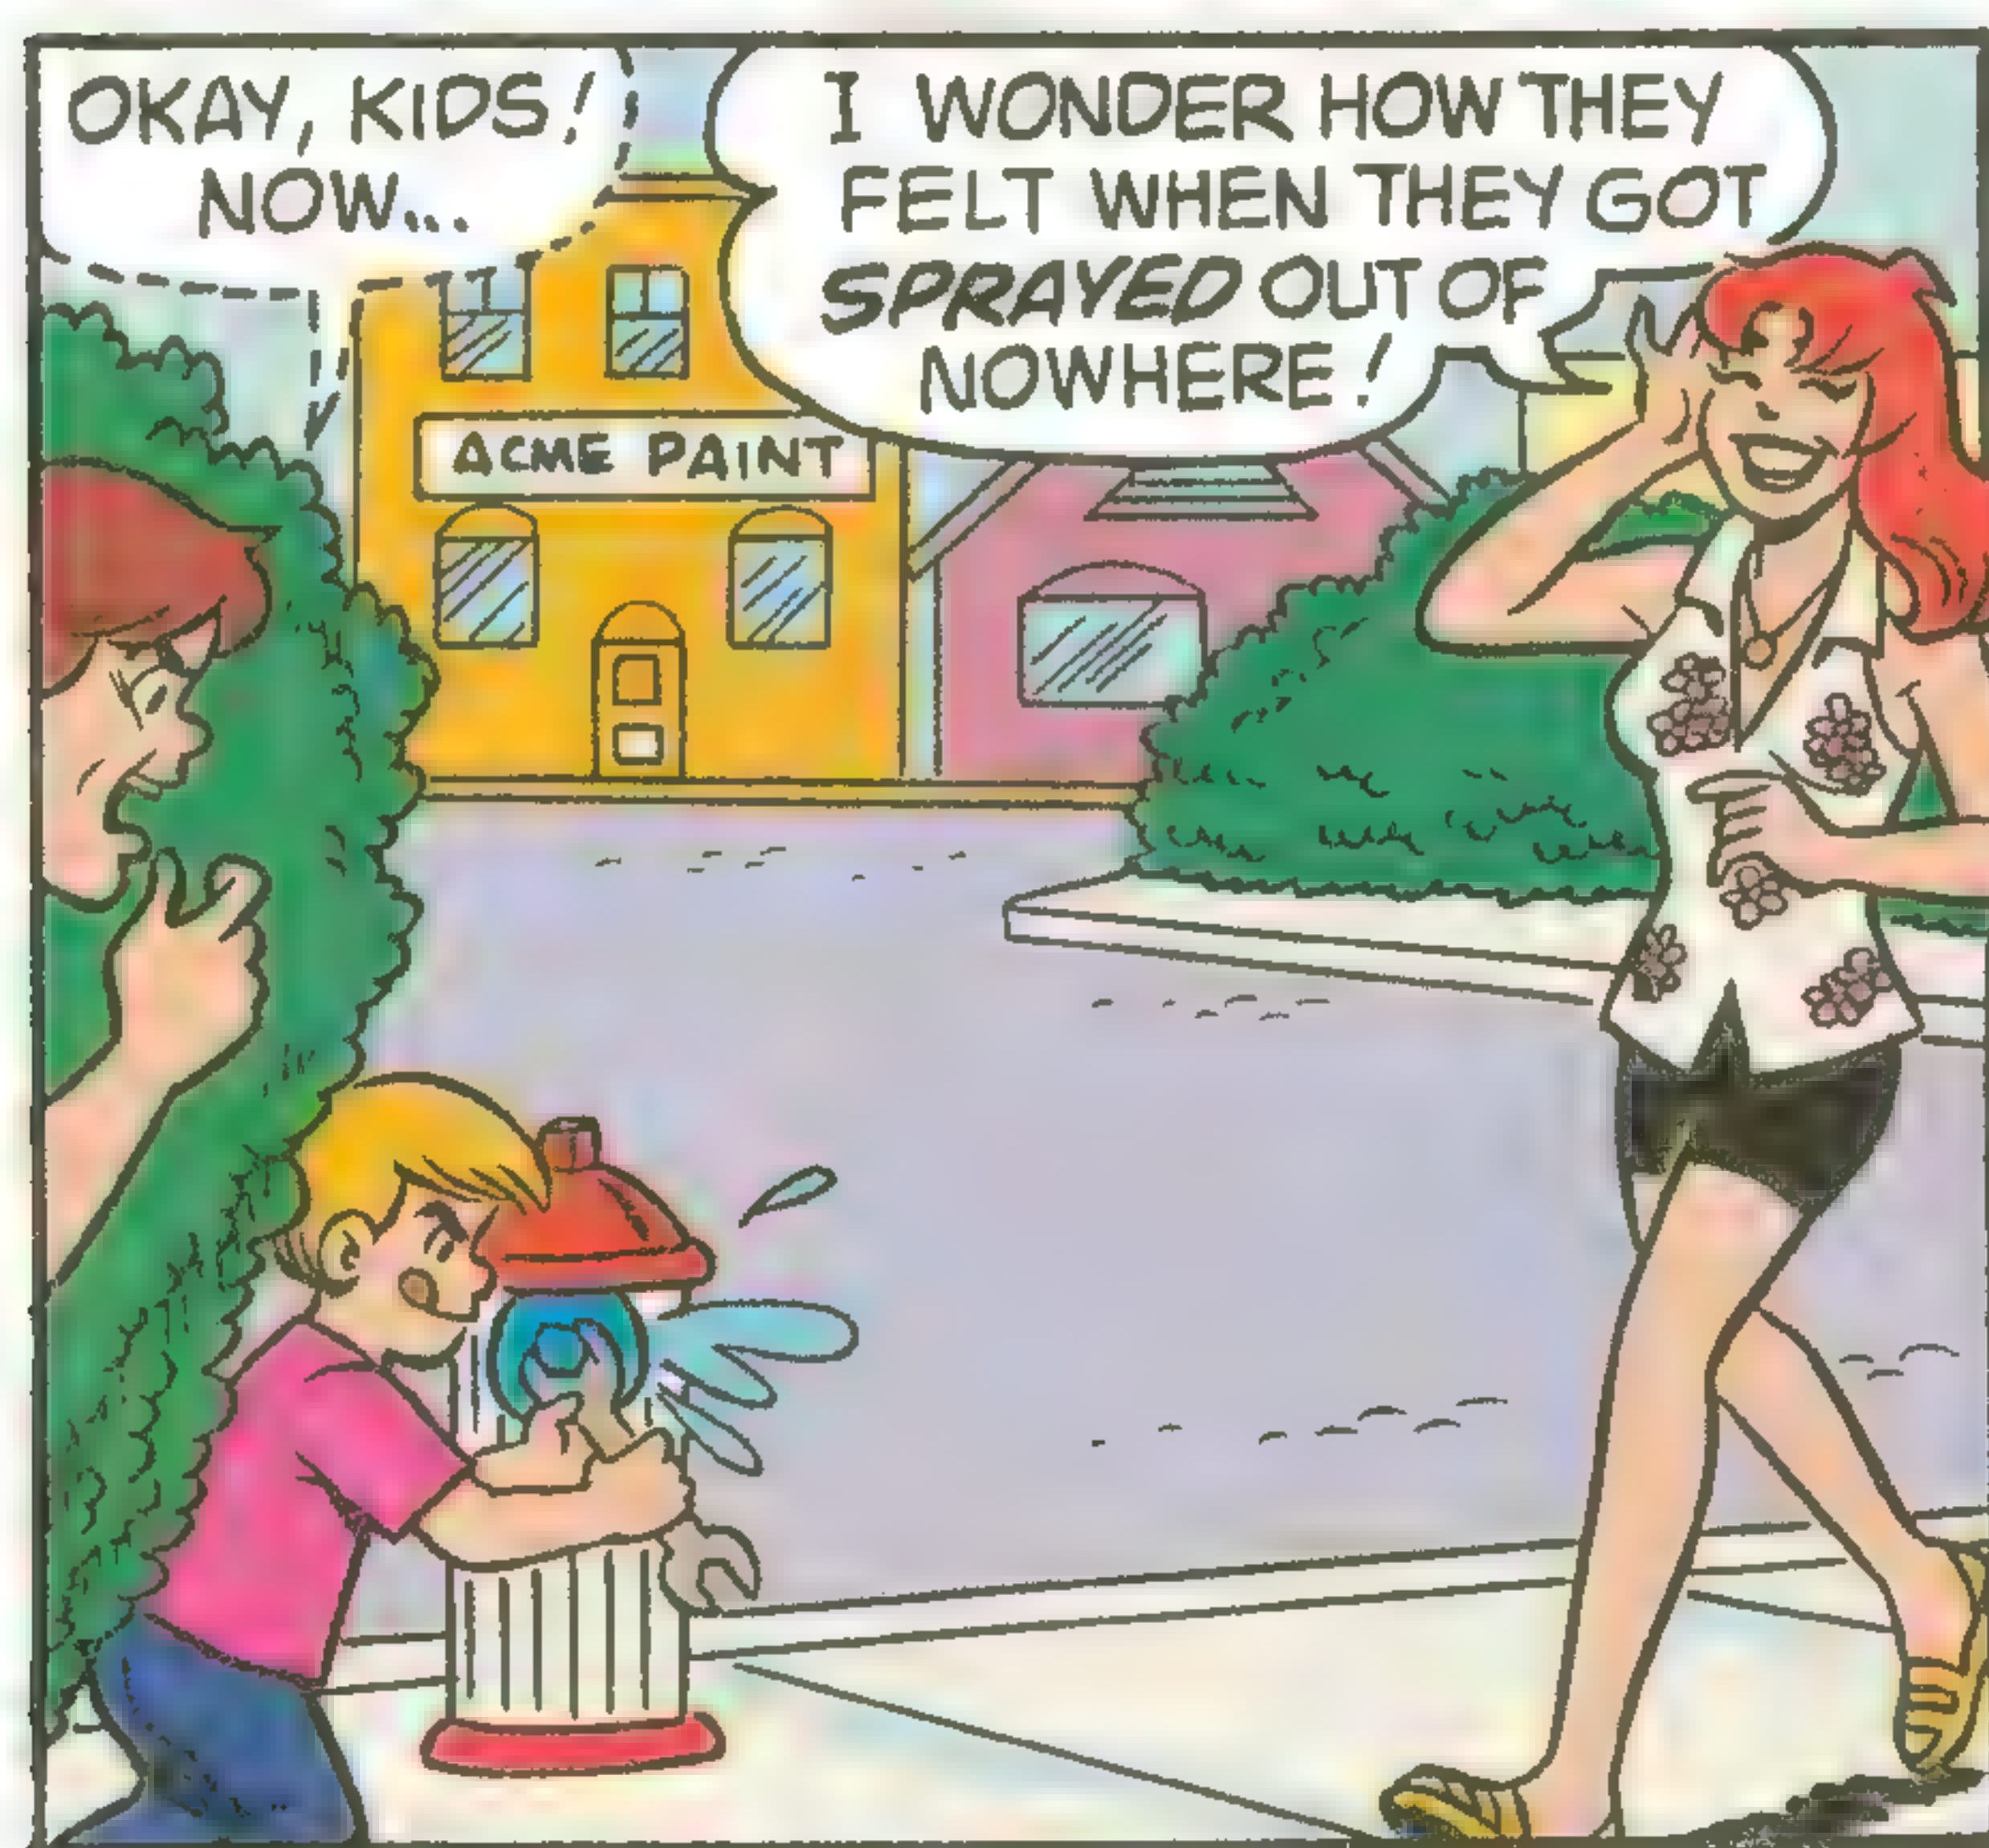

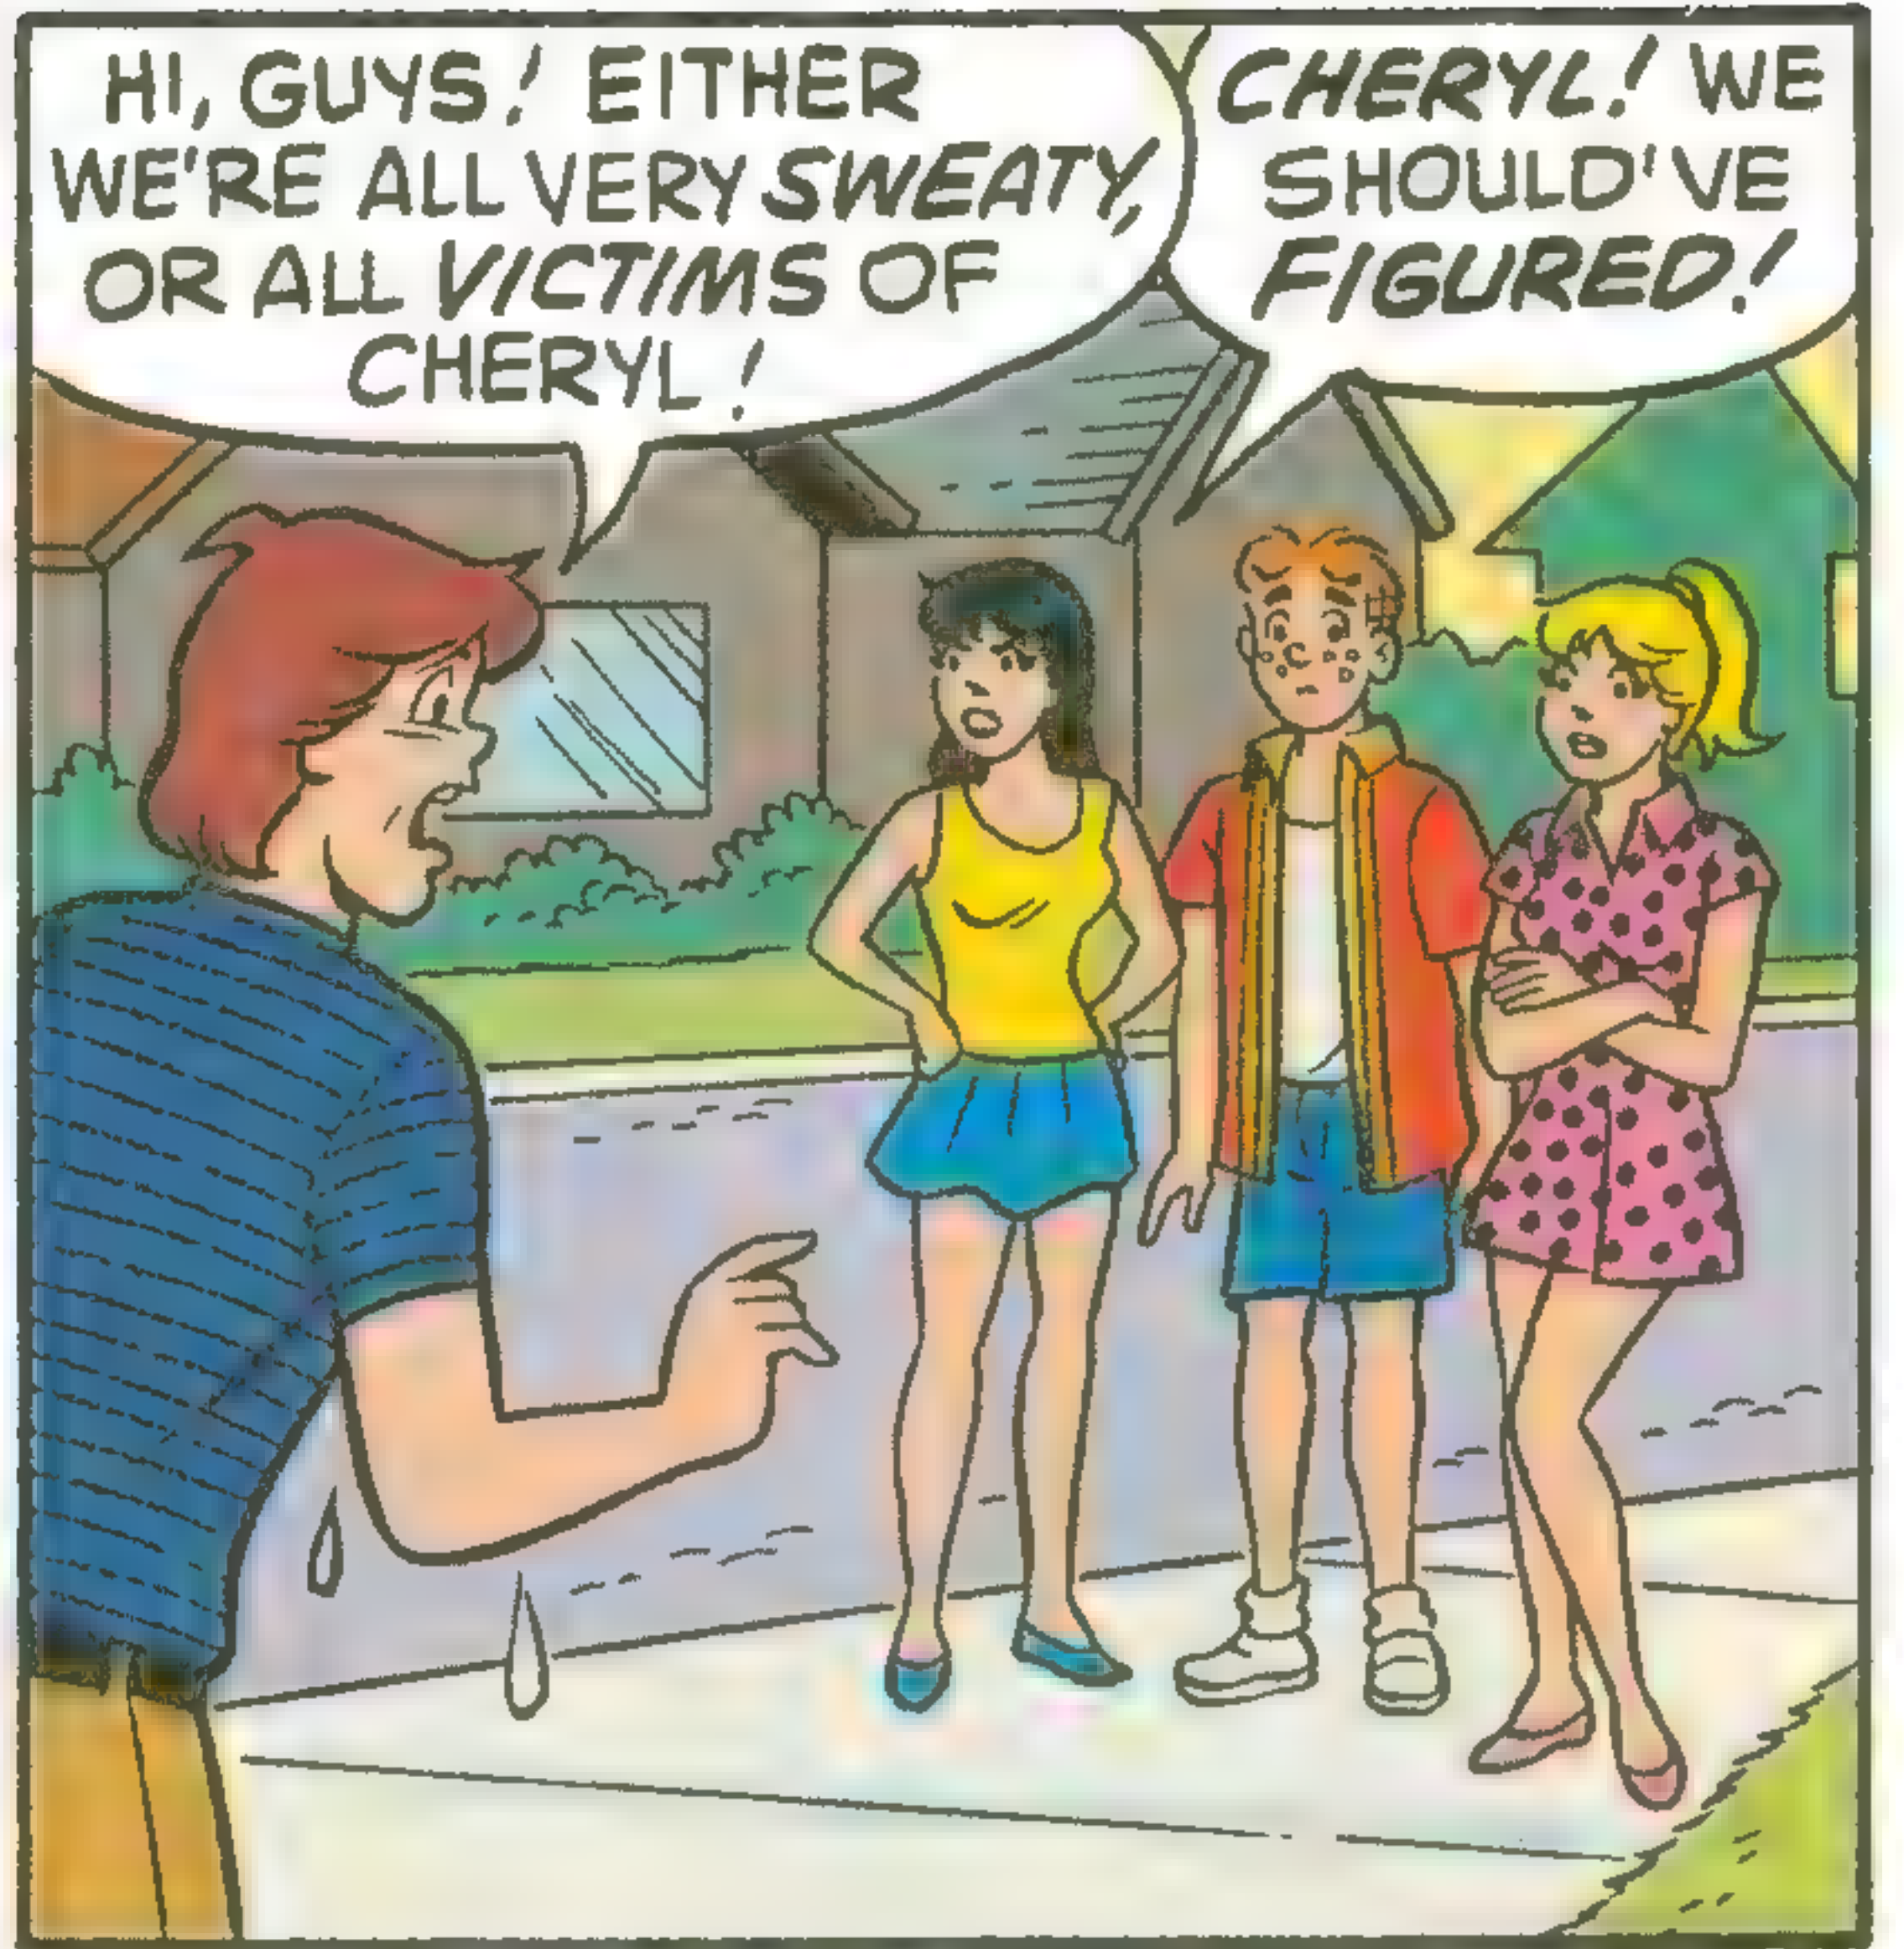

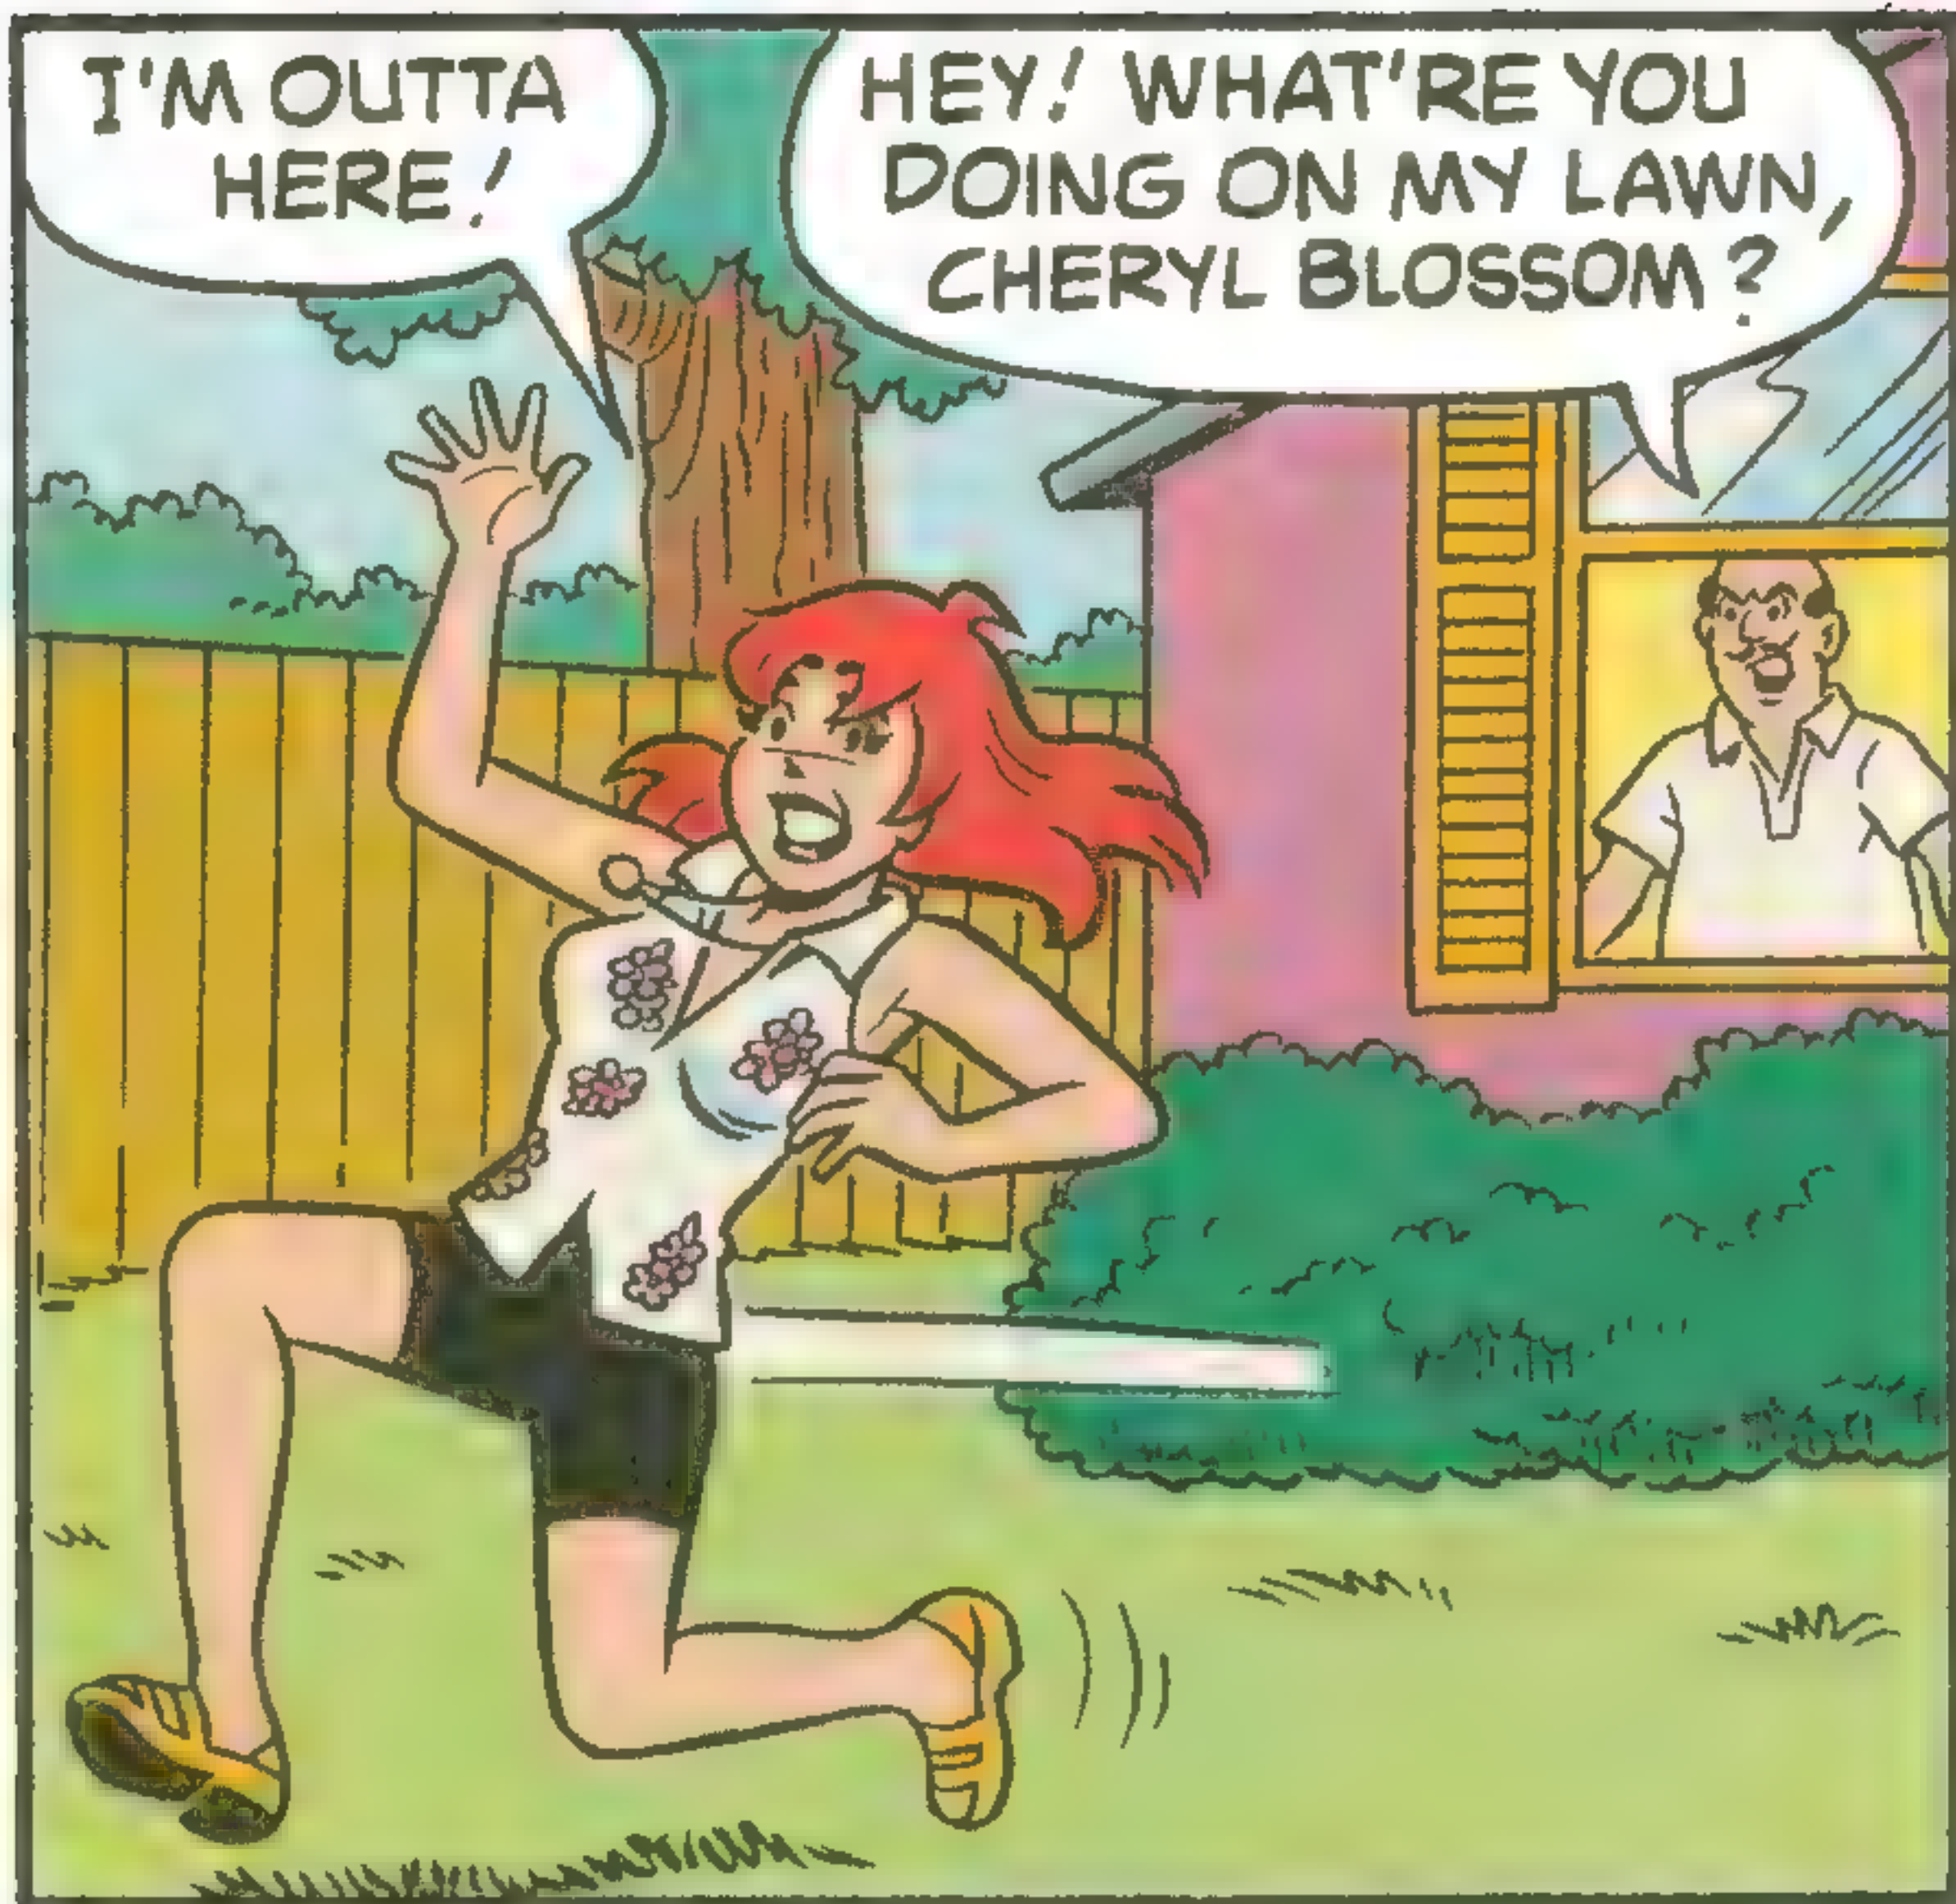

ONE-TWO-THREE, HOSE, DO
YOUR STUFF!

ALL OF YOUR LIVES COULD BE PERFECT, IF YOU JUST ALWAYS ACT LIKE ME!

Dear Cheryl

HER LIFESTYLE IS TOTALLY MEANINGLESS & EMPTY!

SO WHY LISTEN TO HER?!

BY SARA ALGASE

Dear Cheryl,

I want to be pretty and cool. But my mom says I am already. I have to wear glasses, I don't have any cool clothes, and my hair-do is awful. I'm ten and my mom won't allow me to wear make up. — Lindsey, Ashland, PA

Dear Lindsey,

Well, you're a little young for contact lenses and you need your glasses to see, right? It's not attractive to be bumping into walls. Maybe for your birthday your mom will spring for a make-over. A few cool additions to your wardrobe and a trendy new haircut could make you feel cool. And if you want more tips on looking great, just look at me. — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I like a boy but he's going out with a snob. A friend asked him if he wanted to go out with me and he said no. What should I do? — About to Cry, Greenville, OH

Dear About to Cry,

Don't cry over this guy. He's not worth it (plus you'll smudge your mascara!) Why don't you make him jealous by dating someone who's cuter, taller and nicer than him? Don't get upset, get another boyfriend! — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I have short hair and I think it looks dumb. All my friends say I look really pretty but I don't think so. What should I do? — Katie, Winnipeg, MB

Dear Katie,

Short hair is cool. It's easy to wash and you spend less time holding a blow-dryer. I would get my hair cut short too, but I've grown kind of attached to my trademark tresses. Anyway, I say listen to your friends. Friends don't often have compliments to give so when they do have a nice word to say, pay attention. — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I really need new clothes but my family can't afford it. We're on a tight budget. My friends are always saying stuff like, "How many times have you worn that?" What can I do about my wardrobe?

— Need New Clothes, Miami, FL

Dear Need New Clothes,

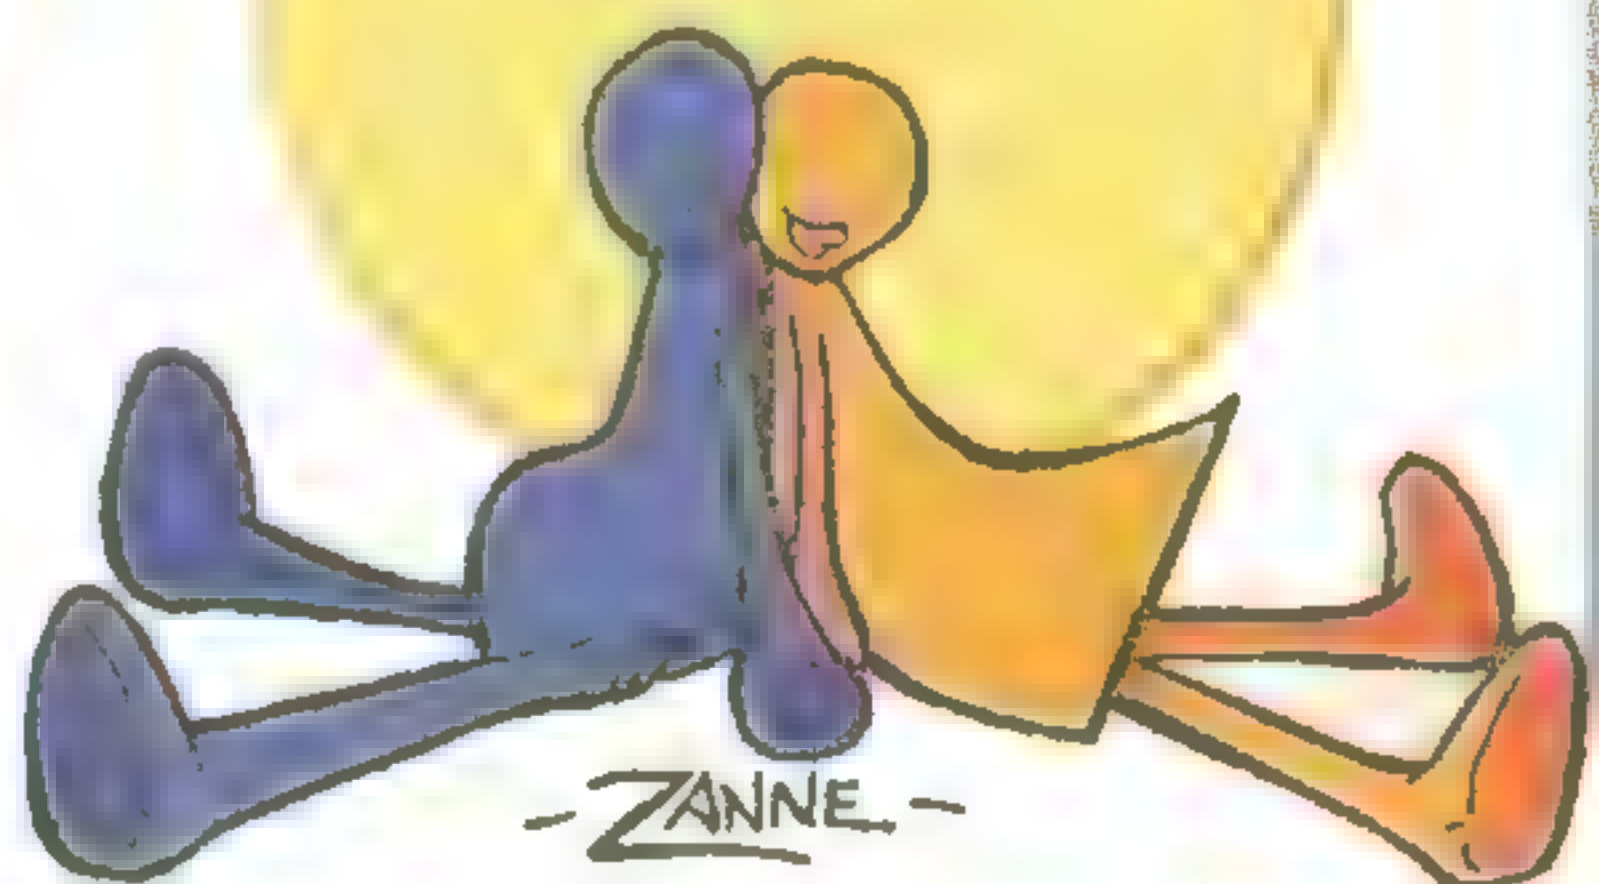

If your friends are so worried about your fashion success, ask them to lend you some clothes. After all, what are friends for? Also you've got to be imaginative when you're on a tight budget. Borrow a shirt or two from mom, go through yours or even your parents' old clothes. Before they were just out-of-date, but now they're vintage. — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I have major guy problems. I had two boyfriends and they both dumped me on the same day. All my best friends have boyfriends and they get a ton of attention. Now the only guys who like me are geeks or guys who tease me about my red hair and braces. I'm a pre-teen and I need a boyfriend! — Need Major Help, Moreno Valley, CA

Dear Need Major Help,

Hey, there's nothing wrong with red hair. I happen to think it's very attractive. Brown and blonde are such common hair colors, don't you think? Anyway, you don't need a boyfriend to be happy and popular, it just helps. Cheer yourself up and go shopping. Maybe you'll even run into some cute guys at the mall. — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I'm like a magnet when it comes to attracting guys. The boys think I'm a babe but the girls think I'm snotty. I don't have any friends, only boys, and sometimes they just don't get it. — Help, Ajax, Canada

Dear Help,

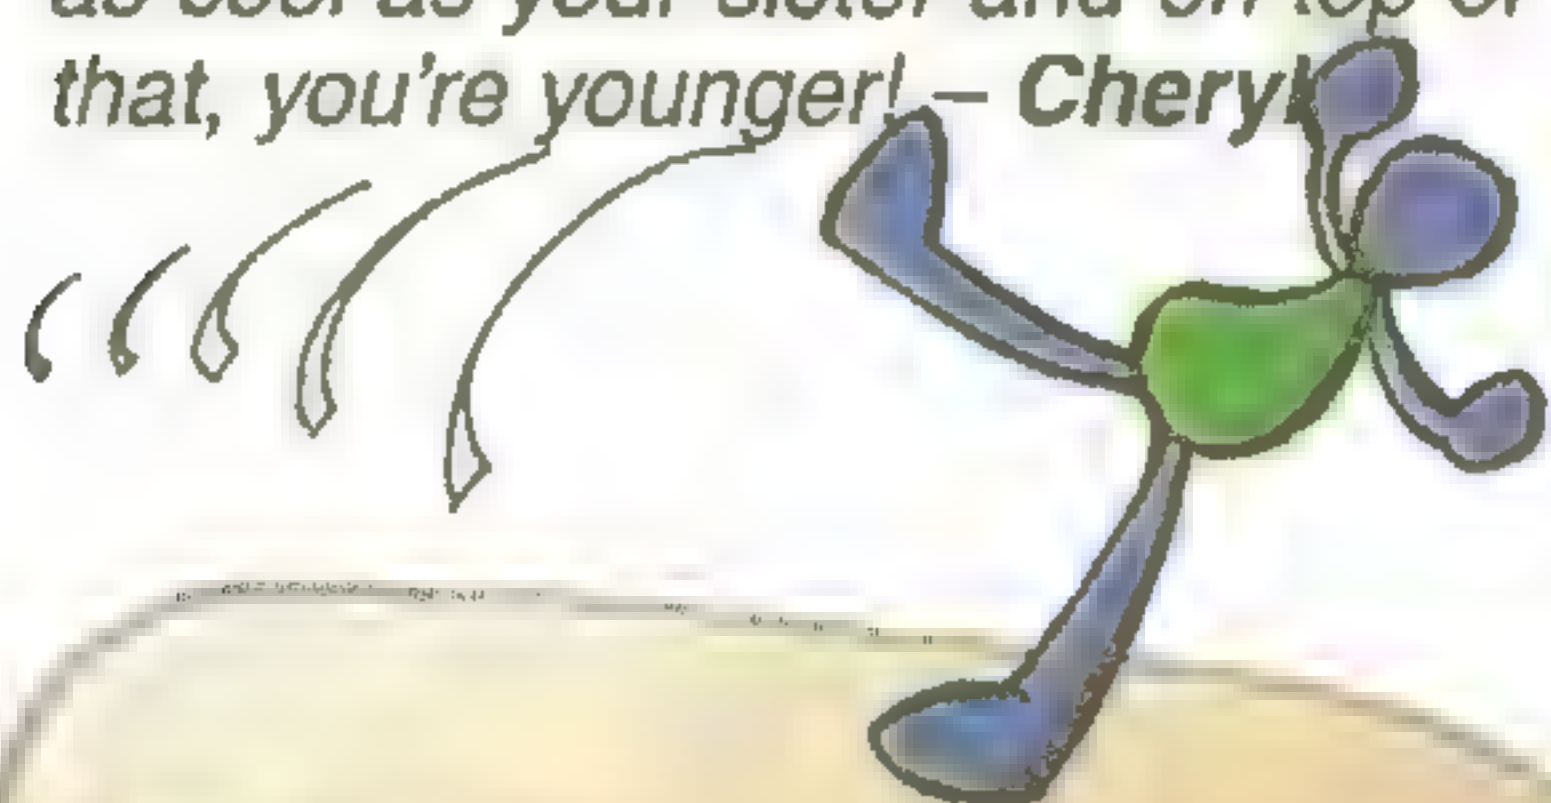

No wonder those girls are jealous of you if you're attracting guys like a magnet. I'd be jealous too, if I weren't Cheryl Blossom. But a girl does need gal-pals, you know. I mean who are you going to discuss all the juicy details of your dates with? Being popular is no fun without friends to brag to. I'm sure you can find a friend or two who won't mind being your pal (and dating your cast-offs.) — Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I'm eleven years old and I like a boy who's twelve. He likes my sister who's fifteen. I'm not allowed to date or wear make up and she is. How do I get this boy to notice me and not her? —Kathleen, Manitou Springs, CO

Dear Kathleen,

So your sis is stealing all the attention, huh? Why don't you talk her into some after-school activity, like ballet or the debate team? That'll keep her out of the way when you want to impress this boy. So you can't date him yet, but you can flirt with him. Let him know you're just as cool as your sister and on top of that, you're younger! —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

These girls at school made up a club. I asked to be in it and they said no. My friend asked if she could join the club and they said yes. Whenever the girls see me now, they act snobby, even my friend. I try to be nice but whenever I try talking to them, they start insulting me. —Angry, Ontario, Canada

Dear Angry,

Those girls are mean to not let you into their club. But you can beat them at their own game. Form your own club. The membership will consist only of the cutest boys in school and you. Then when these girls want to join, tell them you'll consider letting them in if they apologize and let you borrow their favorite hair scrunchies. —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

Do you have any good flirting tips? There's this one guy and I can't get his attention. He's got cute hair, beautiful blue eyes and a great personality. Can you help me? —Jasmine, Lake Lerlanau, ME

Dear Jasmine,

This guy sounds like a honey. If you get tired of him, be sure and send him my number. About flirting, you've come to the right place. Boys like to be complimented almost as much as girls. Tell him what you think of his hair and his personality. He'll be sure to stick around to hear more. —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

There are two boys in my class, David and J.W. I like David more but whenever I talk to him, J.W. interrupts and talks to me instead. I try so hard to talk to David. Now David thinks I don't like him. —Not Sure, El Paso, TX

Dear Not Sure,

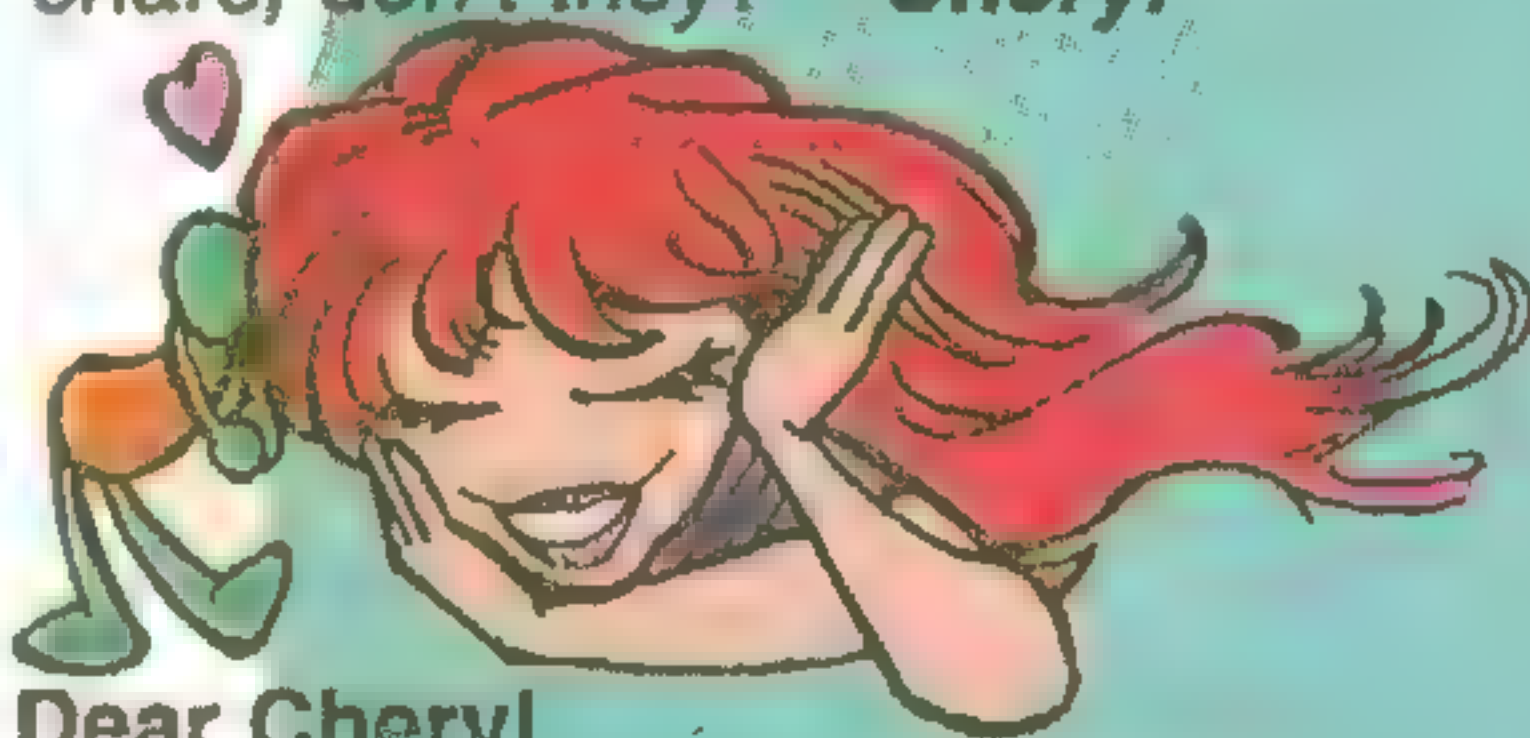

Who ever said popularity was easy? The secret is to let everyone know you enjoy the attention, and at the same time let David know he's the one you'd like to buy you your popcorn at the movies. Slip him a note when no one's looking and meet him in the cafeteria where you can discuss dating plans over the Green Tuna Special. —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

My best friend took my boyfriend. I still like him and he likes me. Should I steal him away from her? —Stealer, Kansas City, MO

Dear Stealer,

It sounds like your friend just made a little mistake: She borrowed your boyfriend and she forgot to give him back! It must have just slipped her mind. I don't see what's wrong with taking back what was yours in the first place! After all, good friends share, don't they? —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

There's a boy in my class named Danny. I think he's cute. I wish he'd like me but he flirts with this other girl in my class. How should I wear my hair? —Please Tell Me, Hayward, CA

Dear Please Tell Me,

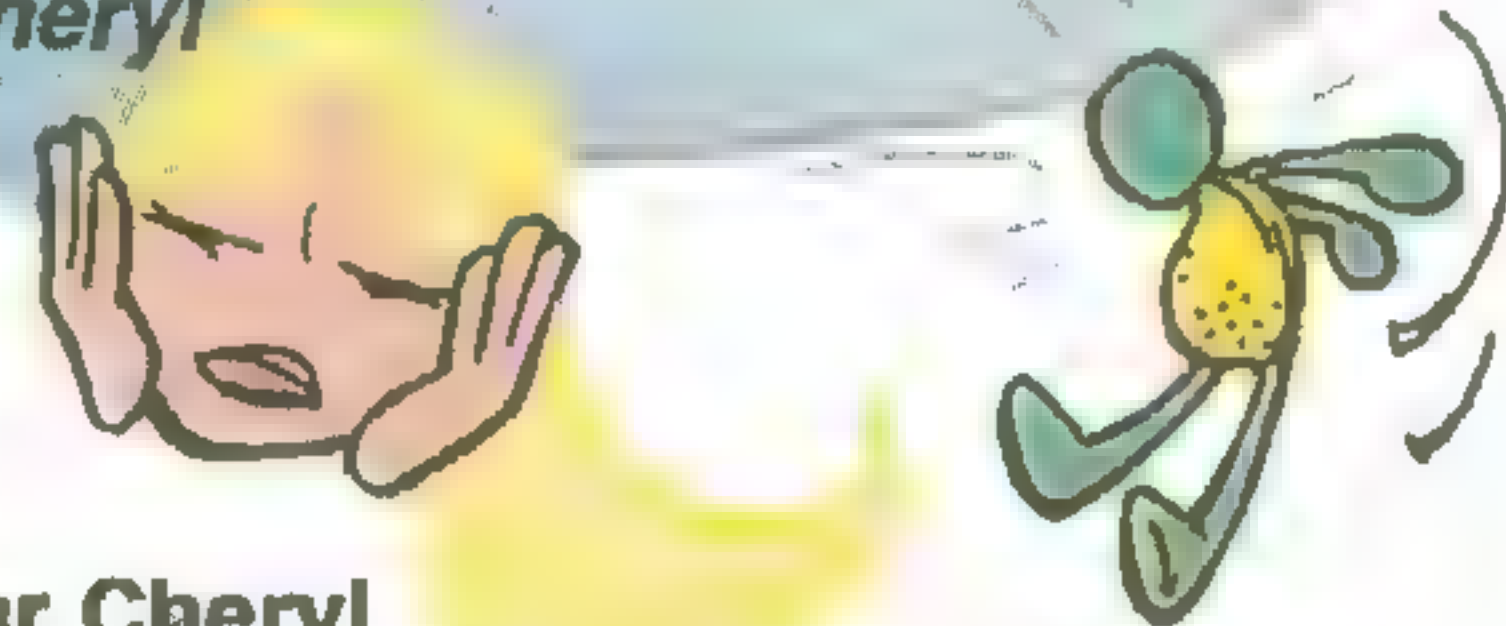

Hair is a very important element in attracting the guy you like. Your hair shouldn't be too puffy or too short. You don't want to smack him in the head with a big bunch of hair but you don't want him needing a magnifying glass to find your hair either. The best look is red, bouncy and healthy, kind of like mine! —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

I had a boyfriend once but on the day of our date he called me up and canceled. He said he had better things to do and obnoxiously hung up! Now whenever I walk by he totally ignores me. He has new friends and he never speaks to me. What happened? —Wanting Revenge, Huntsville, AL

Dear Wanting Revenge,

It seems to me you picked a sour lemon. There are a couple in every bunch. The best revenge, however, is to look terrific. Get out the sparkly nail polish and eyeshadow! Let this guy know he hasn't put a dent in your confidence at all. And be sure and tell his next girlfriend all about how obnoxious he was to you. —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

There's this guy in my school. I really like him and I think he likes me but I don't know how to tell him I like him. I'm afraid he'll laugh at me and tell the other kids that I like him. What should I do? —Stephanie, Raleigh, NC

Dear Stephanie,

You don't want to tell this boy you like him. That's so direct, so ordinary. Boys are so confused about love. They need someone to make their minds up for them. Just start acting like you know he likes you but that you couldn't care less about him. Pretty soon he'll start to believe it! Funny how that works. —Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,

There are two boys I like in Karate class. One has a girlfriend and the other doesn't care about me at all. I can't help myself. I love 'em both. —Lost in Love, Pasadena, CA

Dear Lost in Love,

Maybe these boys don't notice you yet, but then you probably haven't made the most of your Karate outfit. Those cute little Karate dresses are so flattering, don't you think? Mysterious and so unique. With the right lipstick and your hair in a pretty bun, you'll come out a winner. And don't forget to accessorize. —Cheryl
